Long-Term Multi-Risk Emergency Kit for 10 People

The long-term first-aid kit for up to 10 people is designed for businesses, workshops, local governments, and other professional settings that require a compact supply of basic first-aid supplies.

It is part of a line developed around supplies with an extended shelf life. Its contents include, in particular, a sterile cleansing water spray, various sizes of bandages, sterile gauze pads, a pressure bandage, and the necessary materials for securing and holding them in place.

A hard-case version of the long-lasting kit

The choice between the soft kit and this case depends primarily on the intended use and desired storage method. The first-aid contents remain the same.

The polypropylene case provides a rigid container that protects the supplies and makes it easier to store them in a workshop, a vehicle, a utility room, or a dedicated first-aid area.

One of its unique features is a 50-ml aerosol can of sterile cleansing water, intended for cleaning minor wounds. Farmor also highlights this solution as a way to limit the use of certain products that may cause reactions in sensitive users.

requiring greater compression.

Two elastic strips measuring 3 m × 5 cm and a roll of tear-off adhesive tape allow you to secure a compress or provide light support.

A survival blanket rounds out the kit to provide temporary thermal protection when the situation calls for it.

Everything You Need for a Quick Response

The kit also includes a pair of 15-cm Lister scissors, a flat-jawed splinter remover, 12 safety pins, and a pair of disposable gloves.

Three compresses impregnated with a calendula-based bruise-relief solution round out the kit for minor everyday injuries.

Long-term storage does not eliminate the need for inspections

Even when a kit is designed for extended shelf life, it is still necessary to check its contents regularly.

Used supplies must be replaced, and the condition of the packaging and expiration dates must be checked to ensure the kit remains complete and available when needed.
